The proposals are under discussion with the Planning Commission who have inidcated that the resources to this extent may not be available and the draft proposals will have to be scaled down substantially:

The draft plan had proposed to provide telephone and telex connections all over India including Andhra Pradesh practically on demand. This would have involved nearly doubling the telephone exchange capacity and substantial increase in the telex capacity. It also proposed provision of long distance public telephones within 5 Kms of most village habitation, involving an addition of 2,159 long distance public telephones to the existing 3735 in Andhra Pradesh.

In view of the limited resources, the proposal will be finalised once the total allocation has been agreed to.
